A photographic exhibition of our threatened heritage

No Time To Spare, Southern Highlands, highlights some of the at risk heritage of the Highlands. The collection of photographs of the area has been created by local Southern Highlands photographers.

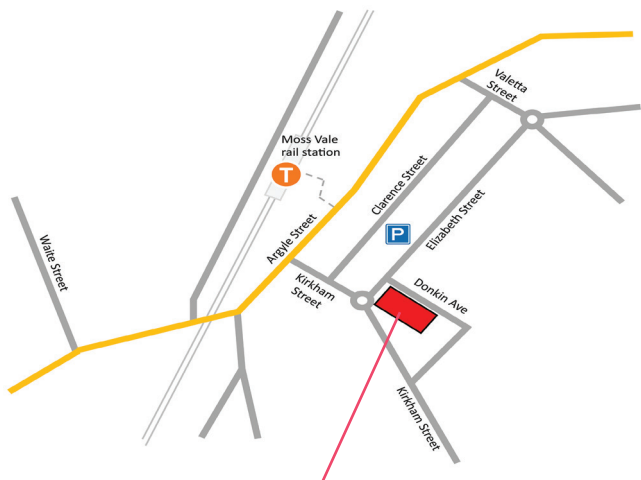

The story ...

In 1961 the National Trust staged an exhibition of photographs by renowned photographer Max Dupain. Entitled “No Time To Spare” it featured 34 buildings identified as worthy of preservation. Sixty years later in 2021, the Trust staged a second “No Time To Spare” exhibition of photographs by several photographers. And now, in 2023, a collection of images of local properties has been brought together to create ...
